Published July 31, 2024

As part of The Ohio State University's commitment to promoting a safe and healthy campus environment, members of the university community have the right to be free from all forms of hazing, which impede the realization of the university's vision of being a 21st-century public, land grant, research, urban, and community-engaged institution. The university has zero tolerance for hazing in any form and all members of the university community must conduct themselves in a manner that supports an environment free from hazing.

Collin's Law requires universities to provide updated reports before the first day of January and August each year. Ohio State already shares information on Student Conduct proceedings for registered student organizations, including social Greek letter organizations. You can find that information here or by copying the following URL into your browser: <https://stophazing.osu.edu/violations>

In compliance with Collin's Law, the following report identifies all hazing violations under the Code of Student Conduct since the university's last update published on December 22, 2023. This report is the university's fourth Collin's Law report since the enactment of Collin's Law.

Personal identifying information for individual students has been removed in accordance with the Family Educational Rights and Privacy Act of 1974.

More information about reporting hazing, anti-hazing training and other prevention, reporting and supportive resources available to students, staff and faculty are found on the university's hazing prevention website here or by copying the following URL into your browser: <https://stophazing.osu.edu/>
